
A group of Hindi movie goers are in for a treat this Friday, when they play the 1995 film Kaun Kare Kurbanie. The movie is set in India during the 17th century when Emperor Akbar was in power. His son Prince Salim tries to find love with a princess, but is caught up in an intricate web of deception and intrigue that leads him to murder his own father. The film is based on the epic poem Padmavat by Malik Muhammad Jayasi, which can be seen as one of the first manifestations of Indian fiction. It is also known as 'the first Hindi-language movie to use colour' ('A New Hope for the Eighties' "Kaun Kare Kurbanie"). The film stars Anil Kapoor, Madhuri Dixit, Farooq Shaikh, Naseeruddin Shah and Amrish Puri. The music is by Laxmikant Pyarelal. The cast includes Anil Kapoor, Madhuri Dixit, Feroz Khan, Naseeruddin Shah and Amrish Puri.

Although several sources list the film as being released in January 1995 - eg IMDB <http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0109002/>; the film's own website <http://www.kaunkare.com/> and the movie's Wikipedia page http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kaun_Kare_Kurbanie - it is confirmed that the film was released only in 1995, ie, not in January or anywhere near that time. It is theorized that this may be because it was a holiday release, possibly Diwali 1995 - which IMDB lists as being between November 1 and 3rd 1995. The film was shot mostly in Gondal, Gujarat and at Rajasthan. It was released on 27 December 1995, and was a huge flop. The music is by Laxmikant Pyarelal and the lyrics are by Anand Bakshi. The CD release is from Venus Records/T-Series; Track List: http://www.t-series.com/album_detail.php?albumid=113&aid=3
